SUMMARY

Liability is a fascinating subject which has developed over centuries by case precedence and statute. In recent years as we have become a more aware and litigious society, case law and legislation have developed and as a result this part of the civil justice system is complex and wide reaching.

This course aims to delve deeply into the civil tort of liability and how it has been shaped over the years.

We will consider the exposures that the liability class of insurance may face together with supporting legislation. We will also look at how the law has changed in recent years and the effect that has had on the insurance industry. We will also examine the challenges that both the client and the underwriter face and the management of risk in this area.

This course most suited to those who have some experience in the insurance industry and a familiarity with liability insurance.
